

Washington, D.C.- Congressman Steve King (R-IA) today released the following video statement regarding the tenth anniversary of the tragedies of September 11, 2001:

"We are a stronger people as a nation. We're stronger, we're pulled together, we understand the value of freedom and the safety that we have within this country. We pay more attention than we did before to the values that came to us through the Declaration, through the Constitution, from our Founding Fathers. We recognize that our rights come from God and they must be defended. And they are precious and a dollar value cannot be put upon these rights of liberty and freedom that we have. It is our job to protect, preserve and defend them for the succeeding generations, just as those who have gone before us have protected and preserved our rights and our liberty for us."
