

King Meets with Iowa Farm Bureau Members

Washington, DC - Today, Congressman Steve King met with members of the Iowa Farm Bureau during their visit to Washington, DC. The group was in town during their annual trip to Capitol Hill to discuss various legislative and public policy issues with members of Iowa's Congressional delegation. Among the items discussed during today's meeting were the upcoming reauthorization of the Farm Bill, Estate Tax reform, and EPA regulatory reform. King released the following statement about the meeting:

"It's always great to hear from members of the Iowa Farm Bureau. These are the people who are on the front lines of Iowa agriculture. With a Farm Bill reauthorization right around the corner, it is important to get their input on the issues that Congress will soon be debating through that process. The Iowa Farm Bureau helps to ensure that Iowa's farmers and producers are part of the public discourse and the legislative process. It's an important role they play, and I'm happy I had the chance to meet with them today."
